OPINIONS OF SUPREME COURT'S DECISION

London Believes it will Prove Fruitless Victory—Schwab is Optimistic—Carnegie Thinks it Presages New Commercial System.

Special to Telegram.

London, May 16.—The conceusus of opinion expressed in the afternoon newspapers is that the Standard Oil decision is a theatrical but fruitless victory for the opponents of the trusts.

Berlin, May 16.—Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, who arrived here today, stated that he believed the Standard Oil decision would clarify American business conditions and have much to do with ending the stagnation which has prevailed in the United States during the past three or four years.

New York, May 16.—Speaking this afternoon at the annual meeting of the New York Peace Society, Andrew Carnegie thus referred to the Standard Oil decision of the Supreme Court.

"We have a Supreme Court worthy of its high functions. We will establish a new commercial system and have a new commercial life. We will have a court of commerce, which to industry will be what the Supreme Court is to the nation and laws. Combinations being allowed, regulation must follow. We have discarded a wornout system, adopting one suitable to our time."

Administration Is Satisfied.

Washington, May 16.—The administration is satisfied with the Standard Oil decision and will take no steps to alter the Sherman anti-trust law during this session of Congress. President Taft is reported as saying that whatever opinions he entertained last year he abandoned when the Supreme Court spoke. He characterized the decision as a "very useful one."

Actress Will Not Wed Aviator.

Special to Telegram.

London, May 16.—The engagement of Pauline Chase, the noted actress, and Graham White, aviator, has been cancelled. Miss Chase says that there was no unpleasantness. "We both realize that our engagement was a mistake." she says.

DR. H. N. SNYDER WILL ADDRESS G. F. C. GRADUATES

President of Wofford College to Make Literary Address at Graduating Exercises This Morning—Concert This Evening—Alumnae Reunion and Banquet Last Night.

The graduating exercises of the class of 1911 of Greensboro Female College will be held this morning at 10:30 o'clock and the commencement exercises will be concluded tonight when the annual concert will be given.

The graduating exercises this morning will consist of the presentation of certificates, diplomas and Bibles and the literary address by Dr. Henry N. Snyder, president of Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C. The program will be interspersed with music.

The public is extended a cordial invitation to be present at both this morning and this evening's exercises.

Alumnae Elects Officers.

The Alumnae Association met yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the college, there being a large and representative attendance from all parts of the State. Mrs. Lucy H. Robertson welcomed the alumnae and former students in her usual gracious manner. A piano duet by Mrs. J. Norman Wills and Mrs. Myra Albright was greatly enjoyed.

The president of the association, Mrs. Frank Martin, of Winston-Salem, made her annual report in which the work accomplished during the year was discussed and Mrs. Martin had many items of congratulation because of the excellent work accomplished by the association. She also mentioned the fact that the college is to soon have a much-needed dormitory and in the near future an up-to-date music hall.

Mrs. Martin spoke of the loyal alumnae associations throughout the state and stated that they were links in a chain that binds the Alumnae and former students in close affiliation for a larger and more useful service in behalf of the interests of their alma mater.

The reports from the other officers and chairmen of committees were heard with interest and they were inspiring because of the work accomplished in the different departments of the work.

It was reported that $10,000 had been pledged for the memorial column fund and of this amount over $3,000 has been paid in.

After a number of short, but enthusiastic speeches by members of the association the election of officers for the ensuing year was gone into and resulted as follows:

Mrs. Frank Martin, Winston, president, by acclamation.

Mrs. S. L. Alderman, Greensboro; Mrs. Frank Townsend, Leaksville; Miss Mai Smith, Gatesville, vice-presidents.

Mrs. E. L. Sides, Greensboro, treasurer. She has already served 20 years in this office.

Miss Nannie Lee Smith, recording secretary.

Mrs. A. B. Kimball, corresponding secretary.

Mrs. Frank Robbins, chairman of the memorial fund committee.

Miss Carrie Young, association reporter.

Class Day Exercises.

The Class Day exercises were held yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, there being a large audience of alumnae and friends of the institution present. The exercises consisted of the May pole dance, the reading of the class history, statistician's report, chorus, prophecy, last will and testament, poem and planting of the ivey. The programs were printed in the class colors, garnet and white and in addition to the program of exercises contained the college and class songs. Representatives of twenty former classes participated in the march exercises.

The exercises on the campus consisted of the preliminary marches, the crowning of the queen and the May pole dance. The class then repaired to the piazza and the following program was carried out:

Class History—Annie Woodley.
Statistician's Report—Alice Blanchard.
Chorus—College Song.
Class Prophecy—Edwin Hunt.
Last Will and Testament—Huldah Hambrick.
Class Poem—Linnie Mann.
Class Song.

The planting of the ivey and the unwinding of the May pole completed the exercises of the afternoon.

The Alumnae Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Alumnae Association last evening was the most largely attended as well as the most enjoyable ever held by the association. The college library had been converted into a dining hall and covers laid for 150. An excellent menu was served by the Junior class, the local alumnae association being hostess of the visiting alumnae. The banquet lasted from 8:30 until 11, at the conclusion of which an informal reception was held and alumnae from all parts of the state given an opportunity to exchange greetings. Three generations were represented.

There were seven class reunions yesterday afternoon and at the banquet last night toasts were responded to by representatives of each of the seven classes. Mrs. Frank Martin, of Winston-Salem, president of the association, performed the duties of toastmistress in a delightful manner. The following toasts were responded to, the speeches being in the nature of a summary of the history of the college:

"Our Alma Mater," Mrs. Frank Townsend, of Leaksville, class of '82.

"G. F. C. In Ante-Bellum Days," Mrs. Jesse Cunningham, Greensboro, class of '63.

"G. F. C., of the Past," Mrs. J. N. Atwater, of Fort Mill, S. C., class of '77.

"G. F. C. of the Present," Mrs. Frank Robbins, of Lexington, class of '10.

"G. F. C. of the Future," Miss Ida Hinshaw, of Winston-Salem, class of '96.

"College Loyalty," Mrs. A. B. Kimball and Mrs. J. W. Fry, Greensboro, class of '85.

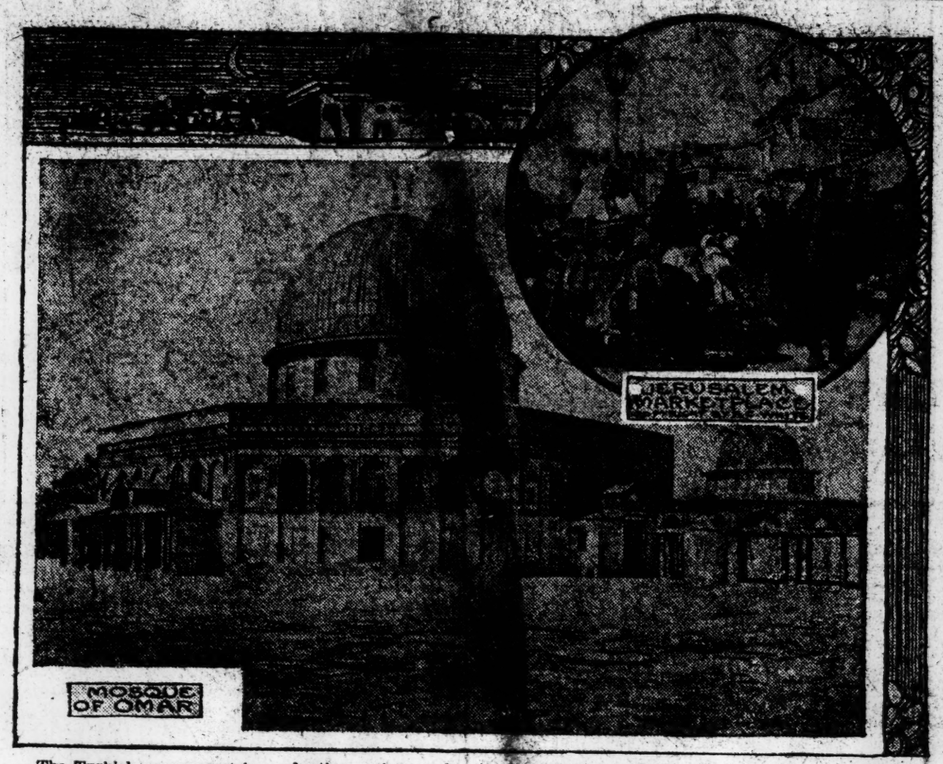
"Our Noted Alumnae," Mrs. G. W. Whitsett, Greensboro, class of '79.

"Our President," Mrs. E. L. Stamey, of Hookerton, class of '92.

Mrs. Martin then called on the sons-in-law of the college. C. H. Ireland responded on behalf of the trustees and Rev. E. K. McLarty responded as college chaplain. Several other short, but enthusiastic talks were made.

During the evening delightful music was rendered by the college orchestra, this adding considerably to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Robbery of the Mosque of Omar at Jerusalem; Articles of Great Antiquarian Value Stolen.



The Turkish government is conducting a vigorous inquiry into the reported robbery of the mosque of Omar at Jerusalem, which was built on the site of Solomon's temple. The objects stolen are said to be an old manuscript of the Bible, the crown, ring and sword of Solomon and numerous other articles of great antiquarian value. An Anglo-American syndicate of excavators is suspected of having had something to do with the depredations. Two years ago they obtained a concession to carry on excavation work half a mile from the mosque of Omar. The conclusion is that a tunnel was dug, entrance effected from underneath and the treasures removed in this way.

TOBACCO TRUST OFFICIALS SAY THEY SEE VICTORY

Special to Telegram.

New York, May 16.—Officials of the tobacco trust profess to see victory ahead in the decision in the government's case against the American Tobacco Company in an effort to break up the trust. It is expected that they will know their fate about May 29.

Officials of the trust state that it was not established in the lower court in the American Tobacco Company case that the defendants conspired with each other or with other persons to exercise a monopoly in restraint of trade; or that the defendants became beneficiaries under contracts whereby traders restricted opportunities that any other traders had before engaging in interstate commerce.

Mrs. Taft Improving.

Special to Telegram.

New York, May 16.—Mrs. Taft continues to improve. It is expected that she will return to Washington tomorrow, accompanied by her daughter, who has been with her during her illness.

TELEPHONE CASE NOT YET DECIDED—SOON—PERHAPS

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, May 16.—At 11 o'clock this morning there was a hearing before the corporation commission in the case of Asheboro Telephone Co. vs. Southern Bell Telephone Co. involving the question whether the Southern Bell shall be required to give long distance connections for subscribers to the Asheboro Telephone Company's exchange and on what conditions. It is a matter that has been tied up for a long time and the Bell Company is now questioning the right of the corporation commission to make an order compelling such connection. Judge Palmer was here from Atlanta to represent the Bell Company, W. C. Hammer represented the Asheboro people. The case will not be decided for some days yet probably.

Ex-Judge Palmer, of Atlanta, general consul for the Bell Telephone Company, made the final argument this evening before the Corporation Commission in the contest before the Commission from Asheboro, in which the Asheboro Telephone Company, having a monopoly of local exchange service there, seeks to compel the Bell Company to give physical connection between its long distance lines and subscribers to the Asheboro Company's exchange subscribers and, incidentally, to the long distance lines of independent companies extending to Greensboro and High Point.

He challenged the right of the Commission to require such connection and cited a ruling of the Commission to this effect in 1905; following this up with a digest of subsequent legislation that he insisted could in no way be construed to give such power. An order for this, he insisted, would amount to forcibly putting at the disposal of the Asheboro Company the vast and very expensive equipment of the Bell Company instead of requiring the Asheboro Company to provide whatever equipment its business required.

This issue is one of the greatest interest, as applying to every part of the State where such differences might arise.

GUILFORD NEGRO IN JAIL IN IREDELL.

Sheriff Jones yesterday received a message from the sheriff of Iredell county stating that he has in custody Clarance King, one of the negroes who escaped from the Guilford jail the latter part of March, the charge against him in Iredell being an assault with a deadly weapon. The Statesville officer said that if the negro was wanted here he would be held for the authorities as soon as he had completed his sentence in that county. Sheriff Jones notified the officer that he would be glad to send for the negro as early as possible. When King escaped from jail he was awaiting trial on the charge of larceny.

CRAIG EXPECTS TO BE THE DEMOCRATIC STANDARD BEARER

Asheville Man in Raleigh Tells Telegram's Correspondent That it Seems Democrats of State Have Determined to Nominate Him for Governor.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, May 16.—Hon. Locke Craig of Asheville, Governor Kitchin's most formidable opponent for the last Democratic nomination for the governorship and who has since that time been recognized as an active and logical candidate for the nomination for governor in 1912, is here to argue appeals in the Supreme Court.

He was asked concerning matters political and remarked with characteristic modesty that it seemed the Democrats of North Carolina are determined to give him the nomination. "This, he said," will be a great honor and the governorship a weighty responsibilty, but if I am made governor, the duties of the office shall have my very best efforts in the direction of conserving the interests of the whole people."

Mr. Craig says the Democracy in Western North Carolina is in splendid shape, the best since 1902, and he looks for a great increase in the party vote in 1912.

OLD EX-CONFEDERATES CAPTURE LITTLE ROCK

Reunion in Arkansas Capital Largely Attended by Veterans and Visitors—Several Cities in Spirited Contest for 1912 Meeting.

Little Rock, Ark., May 16.—The United Confederate Veterans began their annual national reunion today. Thousands of the gray-clad veterans filled the convention hall and cheered enthusiastically when Gen. George W. Gordon, of Memphis, the commander-in-chief, appeared upon the platform.

Governor Donaghey welcomed the visitors to Arkansas and others delivered greetings in behalf of the city of Little Rock and the veterans of the state. Simultaneously with the convention of the veterans are being held the annual sessions of the United Sons of Confederate Veterans and of the memorial associations and other auxiliary bodies.

The annual parade, the unveiling of a Confederate monument in City park and numerous receptions and other social features will combine to make the reunion week a notable one for the thousands of veterans and other visitors now in the city.

Macon, Louisville, Richmond and several other cities are engaged in a spirited contest to secure the 1912 reunion of the veterans.

Labor Leaders Again Charged with Contempt.

Washington, May 16.—The Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, on its own initiative, today instituted proceedings for alleged contempt against President Samuel Gompers, Vice President John Mitchell and Secretary Frank Morrison, of the American Federation of Labor.

Much Property Is Involved.

El Paso, Texas, May 16.—To decide the ownership between nations of seven million dollars worth of property now on the American side of the Rio Grande, in the southern section of El Paso, an international commission met here yesterday.

The land is known as the Chamizal strip and jurisdiction is held by the United States, but Mexico lays claim to it on the ground the river changed from its original course in 1852 by evulsion and that the property thus thrown on the American side is Mexican territory.

HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT WILL BEGIN THIS EVENING

Inter-Society Debate First Feature of Exercises---Class Day Exercises Tomorrow Night in Smith Memorial---Graduating Exercises Friday Evening.

The 1911 graduating class of the Greensboro High School is now prepared to present exercises on an elaborate scale for commencement. The program is to extend over three nights.

The first event will be an inter-society debate, held at 8:30 tonight in the Smith Memorial building. The question "Resolved that the U. S. should fortify the Panama Canal," will be discussed by Chas. Mosely and D. Wills Hunter, of the Diaphesian Debating Society, and by Ralph Lewis and Willard Eutsler representing the Philomelian Society.

The latter team will uphold the negative, opposing the policy of fortifying the canal.

The debate will be presided over by Will Coffin, president of the Diaphesian Society. Henry P. Foust, vice president of the Philomelian Society, will act as secretary. The timekeepers are J. Walter Rowe and Tulley Blair, secretaries of the two societies.

A prize of five dollars in gold will be presented to the best speaker. The judges, Prof. J. I. Foust, Capt. F. P. Hobgood, Jr., and R. G. Vaughn, will also decide the individual winner. The four representatives have prepared excellent speeches to inaugurate and firmly establish this occasion as an annual affair.

Immediately after the debate the Philomelian Society will be the host at a reception in honor of the opposing debating society and the two literary societies, composed of the girls of the High School.

The class day program will be presented on Thursday night. These exercises also will be held at the Smith Memorial building at 8:30 p. m. The following numbers are included:

Salutatory—Henry P. Foust, President.
Class History—Will Coffin, Jr.
Class Poem—W. Doub Kerr.
Class Prophecy—Willard Eutsler.
Reader of the Prize-winning essay, "The Boy Problem in America."—Miss Sarah Monroe.

On Friday night diplomas will be presented to the twenty-nine graduates at the Grand. Prof. H. W. Chase, of the Chair of Pedagogy at the State University, will deliver the annual address to the class. Following this the members will be given diplomas and the leaders of the class in studies will be awarded scholarships. An excellent musical program will be rendered during the evening by the High School chorus, which will be grouped in a large body on the stage.

TEN AUTOMOBILES ENTERED FOR THE RELIABILITY RUN

More Than Forty People will Leave This Morning on Trip to Stir Interest in Railroad Project and Advertise Greensboro---The Entries.

Ten cars had been entered in the Chamber of Commerce reliability run last night and another automobile owner had signified his intention of entering the contest and will probably do so this morning before the starting time. It is expected that several automobilists of the city will accompany the party on the trip. More than forty people will be in the party.

The reliability run, while a loving cup will be awarded the car entered by a dealer making the best record, has two prime objects—to arouse interest in the proposed Greensboro-Roxboro railroad and to advertise Greensboro. The run will also be a big advertisement for the cars entered for the loving cup, especially the machines making the best records.

This is the first event of the kind ever held in the state and is attracting considerable attention. The people along the route to be followed by the cars are especially interested and enthusiastic crowds will greet the autoists at each town and city through which they pass. It is the intention of the party to reach Roxboro shortly after noon where they will take dinner. A number of automobile owners of Roxboro will meet the cars some miles from the city and escort them into Roxboro where a rousing reception is being arranged, also a dinner. Several Roxboro people will accompany the cars as far as Oxford. Tonight will be spent in Henderson and the return trip will be made tomorrow, via Raleigh and Durham.

The Telegram will have a representative in the party and a full account of the trip will be given in tomorrow and Friday morning's Telegram.

The cars that had been entered last night and those who will go on the trip follow:

Chamber of Commerce Car—V. C. McAdoo, R. C. Hood, C. C. McLean.

Rent Car—A. L. Brooks, J. W. Fry, J. T. Fain, E. E. Bain.

Abbott-Detroit Car—Garland Ricks, Archie Joyner, Julian Price, G. S. Bradshaw.

Cadillac Car—G. C. Thomas, Garland Daniel, C. D. Benbow, Dr. Carroll.

Case Car—J. H. Miller, R. P. Gray, Andrew Joyner.

Overland Car—Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Sloan, W. I. Underwood, A. H. Alderman.

Southern Real Estate Car—Luther Coble, W. M. King, Henry Farris, J. R. Cutchin.

A. P. Frazier's Car.

The local representative of the Brush car has announced his intention of competing for the prize, but the car had not been formally entered last night. However, the car will probably be entered this morning before the start.

The cars will leave the postoffice at intervals of 5 minutes, the cars to draw for positions. The pacemaker, the Cadillac, in which Referee Garland Daniel will travel, will be the first to leave, the start being at 7:30 o'clock.

UNION LABEL

Nearly half of the population of Maryland is in Baltimore. Thus it is evident that Baltimore is a city of some importance—in Maryland.

With the commencement season opening up, it looks like the Supreme Court acted hastily in deciding the Standard Oil case without giving the graduates of the classes of 1911 full opportunity to settle the questions at issue.

In view of the fact that his trust is to be destroyed and his means of living wiped out, it is now clearly evident that Uncle John D. acted wisely in putting by a small sum for the distressing days during which the Standard Oil combine is to be dissolved.

Asheville and Durham are coming to the front with some of the greatest philanthropists to be found anywhere. An Asheville man had two thousand gallons of liquor and a Durham man was found to have four hundred pints and both, of course, had it for the purpose of giving it away to thirsty souls.

It is said that a majority of the newspapers of Missouri favor Champ Clark as the Democratic nominee for President. In the remainder of the country, except in Ohio, it looks like a majority of the Democratic newspapers favor Governor Wilson as the party nominee.

The Standard Oil Company was able to declare its usual quarterly dividend on the day on which the Supreme Court of the United States handed down its decision dissolving the corporation. The concensus of opinion is that the Standard will hoodwink the government and reorganize in some manner so that its dividend earning capacity will not be impaired.

THE GROUND ON WHICH RECIPROCITY IS DEMOCRATIC.

Durham Herald says the country expects to be benefitted by reciprocity. Well, some of the people may be expecting to be benefitted by it, but it seems that the farmers of the Northwest cannot be classed with this number. They say reciprocity will ruin their business. Certain of the trusts, also, are opposed to reciprocity on the ground that it will injure their business.

The fact is that the only basis upon which reciprocity can be defended is the good old Democratic doctrine of the greatest good to the greatest number. Reciprocity will probably prevent certain classes of people from making the large profits out of their business which they realize under high tariff exactions; but it will equalize the coast of commodities and lower the cost of living and in this way benefit the majority of the people of the entire country.

This is strictly according to the Democratic idea and to the principles and traditions of the Democratic party. In a country as large and as populous and having interests as diversified as the United States it is almost impossible to legislate in such manner as to make the laws bear alike upon all sections of the country and all classes of people. The only course to pursue is that which is in line with Democratic ideas—that legislation must be planned to help the majority and to injure the minority as little as possible. The Republic is founded on majority rule. Consequently, the interests of the majority are paramount, but the interests of the minority must be considered and taken into account. The majority, however, must not be made to suffer injury in order that the minority may profit thereby; and it is, likewise, undemocratic and unjust to burden the majority with laws which enable the minority to reap unreasonable profits from business at the expense of the majority.

MOVING TOWARD FATE

(By CARA REESE.)

There are some folks who rush toward their fate, others walk, or stroll, even creep at a snail's pace. But they get to their fate finally.

Never waste a minute in bewailing circumstances or conditions as keeping you from what you are destined. You will reach your fate if you have to be literally "jumped" over the rest of humanity. The interesting features lie solely in how you approach your fate. The fate itself has nothing to do with the matter.

Some folks travel all around the world. They knock into this adventure and they bump into that. They take devious ways, they suffer perils and dangers, they undergo hard buffeting and perhaps they come home at last tattered and battered. But fate stands smiling at the well-remembered gate of childhood and the comfortable cottage and loving care are theirs at last. They have spent their lifetime on the road to fate. Fate laughs and waits.

There are those who rush blindly and impetuously on fate. They scoff at difficulties, they hurl aside obstacles, they bring power and ingenuity to bear against hindrance, they wrest position, fame, love or the desired ambition and stand entrenched. Again fate waits and laughs. In the end the destiny is tranquility with an absence of "go" and bluster; in the end perhaps seclusion for health's sake is the imperative edict for years; in the end that which seemed important and foremost is cheerless and tasteless. By and by fate slips in the condition for comfort. There are those who run toward fate. But they slip in the running. The broken bones and bruised flesh take time in the healing. Fate kindly waits. They were too soon, anyway. An interference was necessary.

Those who walk calmly toward fate are the serene ones. But, nevertheless, they lost something by not joining in the running and rushing. The whole compensation lies in how mortals reach their destiny or the roads traveled in the search of fate. Those who walk peacefully have at least consciences. Those who creep and crawl are the sleepy and slothful. These have small stock for reminiscence. Those who hew out an exciting or inspiring road to fate have so much to think and talk about when finally they have reached the goal that fate appearently disappears and has nothing whatever to do with destined control. Hence, in a sense, fate is what you make it. But it is the road you take which is the thing after all.

You may perchance take the wide path with its pernicious allurements and a rapid gait on your part, and fate may still wait you in the end with all perquisites of complete enjoyment. But the "way" spoils the pleasure. Hence, you are responsible in a measure for that which fate hands out. It is not the actual destiny which makes the bitterness, but the path you took in going toward the predetermined and ultimate. It is the trying unworthy, or the not trying and striving for the good and a true development, which makes or mars content in the fixed condition. Destiny sounds like a mighty severe and inexorable decree. But there is neither terror nor substance where mortal has advanced toward it worthily.

FADS OF THE FASHIONS

The all black hat which was so popular during the winter season will remain fashionable during the summer months, as it goes so well with all manner of warm weather cosumes. Black and white effects will also be modish as the combination is still well liked in silks and woolen materials.

Wash ribbon, though it costs more in the start, is the best choice for underwear. Wash it yourself in not too hot water with pure soap, and its beauty is greatly prolonged.

While colored ribbons are charming on night dresses, or any garments where they do not show, they are not good taste to wear under sheer blouses, especially to work in.

Warm, soft colors, pinks, blues, lavender or canary with an occasional pale green, are the only ones permissible in underclothing ribbons of any kind. Red and vivid shades of any kind in underclothing is very bad taste, besides being conspicuous.

If hat ribbons and ribbons which have been worn for collars, belts, etc., become solied, dip them in naptha, or gasoline, shake and dry in the open air. Usually ribbon does not require ironing. Sometimes a taffeta ribbon will not dry without wrinkling, in which case it must be pressed under a piece of muslin with a hot iron. Black ribbons may be renovated by sponging them with a mixture of one-third alcohol to two-thirds water. When partly dry iron them under a piece of black crinoline.

HINTS FOR THE BOUDOIR

(By MILDRED WYCKOFF.)

A Pale Complexion.

A pale complexion is due to anaemia, and this means that the blood is impoverished. It is necessary to eat plenty of underdone beef and steaks, and take raw beef juice. Take ten drops of iron, which can be obtained at any chemist's in a little cold water twice a day.

An anaemic condition would account for nervousness and as you gain in health, the nervousness will improve also.

For a Red Nose.

Bathe the nose with a hot solution of boracic acid, made by dissolving a teaspoonful of boracic acid crystals in a pint of hot water. Bathe for five or ten minutes every night, and then gently massage all round the nose with the tips of the fingers.

For the Hands.

Soak the hands in warm water for a few minutes, then cut a cooked potato in two and rub over the backs and fingers. The potato may be used in this way instead of soap.

If the hands have become very much stained with ink they should be rubbed with lemon juice. If this fails to remove the stains, add a little pearl ash to the water and dip the hands in the solution, rubbing them well with a piece of flannel until the marks have disappeared.

Be careful not to wash them with soap till a few hours later, as the stains will reappear if soap is used on them.

Gerald—You accepted me last night, and now you say you refuse me.

May—Well, I'll tell you what—you propose again, and we'll make it best two out of three.

"Let us not waste our time," yelled the temperance lecturer. "Let us not waste our time in dealing with small saloons and beer shops. Let us go to the fountain head. Let us go to the brewery, my friends."

"All right, boss," chimed in an old soaker from a back seat, "Im with you."

Wife—I came across a bundle of your old love letters today.

Husband—Did you read them over?

Wife—Yes.

Husband—And what was the effect of that persual?

Wife—I wondered which was the bigger fool—you for writing them, or I for marrying you after receiving them.

"Was Jimmie Ruffhouse at the masquerade?"

"Yes. He had the most perfect disguise I ever saw. Nobody recognized him."

"What did he go as?"

"A gentleman."

"I don't know what I am going to do with that boy of mine. He is careless, absolutely reckless of consequences, and doesn't seem to care for anyone."

"That's easy. Make a taxicab driver of him."

"And I can't lie on either side," wailed a legal patient, continuing symptoms of illness.

"Great heavens!" exclaimed the doctor.

"Is it very serious, doctor?" asked the legal patient anxiously.

"Oh, no, not very; but it is the first time I ever met a lawyer who could not lie on either side."

Advertising Talks

H. G. B.

HON. WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN is quoted as saying "A fellow who tries to attract business without advertising is like the fellow who throws his sweetheart a kiss in the dark, he knows what he is doing, but nobody else does." Just another way of expressing it, HE IS HIDING HIS CANDLE UNDER A BUSHEL. The man who succeeds is not the man who pursues such a policy. It makes no difference what business, how attractive are the offers that can be made the prospective customer, very few will be attracted thereby unless the doors are open and the good news spread abroad. DO NOT HIDE YOUR BUSINESS. Let the rays of its progress illuminate in all directions, do not cast a shadow over any of the territory from which you rightfully expect patronage, but let it be known in that territory that you are in business and that you have just the things to suit the wants of the people there.

If you have not realized the importance of advertising, you are standing in your own light. In this progressive age the hustler gets the business, as he rightfully deserves. The concensus of opinion among the most successful business men of the world is that newspaper advertising is the best method. The leading newspapers produce results.

IN GREENSBORO, THE TELEGRAM, THE PAPER THAT GOES HOME, THAT PRINTS ALL THE NEWS THAT IS FIT TO PRINT WHILE THE BLOOM IS ON IT IS THE BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

But Isn't Enjoying It.

"All Chicago" enjoyed its first dip in the lake Sunday. All, that is, except Lorimer; he got his immunity bath some time ago.—Louisville Times.

An Unsuspceted Virtue.

Colonel Roosevelt has given a number of books to the New York Historical society, and, strange to say, they were not his works. Another unsuspected virtue—modesty—Pittsburg Dispatch.

MORE COTTON CLOTHS EXPORTED TO ORIENT

Goods Sent to China and Japan During March Show Decided Increase — Raw Cotton Gains.

Washington, May 16.—Exports of cotton cloths of American manufaqture to China and Japan show a marked revival in the March exports, the total sales thereof to China in that month being 7,857,952 yards compared with but 64,939 yards in March of the preceding year. The nine months' figures are 47 1-3 million yards against 59 1-2 millions in the like period of 1910, 83 1-3 million in the like period of 1909, and 406 million in the corresponding period of 1906, the year of high record exports of American cotton cloths to China. In March, 1910, but 19 barrels of American flour were exported to China; in March, 1911, 34,374 barrels; while the nine months show a gain from 20,119 barrels in 1910 to 231,055 barrels in the present year.

Considering the articles showing large gains in the exports to Japan, raw cotton increased from 3 1-2 million pounds in March, 1910, to nearly 5,000,000 in March, 1911, and the value from $433,796 to $729,606 in the same time. The nine months' exports increased from 34,000,000 pounds valued at $450,000,000 in 1910 to 74,000,000 pounds valued at $11,000,000 in 1911, though these figures are still considerably below the totals reached in certain earlier years. In 1909, for example, the nine months showed a total of 86,000,000 pounds valued at? ? million dollars, and in 1907 a total of 100,000,000 pounds valued at 10 2-3 million dollars. There is, however, a distinct recovering movement in the exports of cotton to Japan, since the accumulated months of the present fiscal year are more than double those of last year for a like period.

MAINE BISHOP INTERDICTS SIX

Members Who Sought to Take Church Property Punished.

Biddeford, Mo., May 16.—Six members of Roman Catholic churches of Biddeford and Lewiston, all prominent persons, were interdicted by Bishop Louis P. Walsh, of the diocese of Portland, in a general letter to the clergy read at churches here and elsewhere in the diocese today. The action which is without precedent in the annals of the church in this State, follows the introduction of the corporation sole of the Portland diocese, by which control of all church property is vested in the Bishop.

This bill, which was backed by a petition signed by nearly 600 Roman Catholics, sought to place the management of the property of the church in Maine in the hands of a board of directors. It was adversely reported on by the legislative committee and was overwhelmingly defeated in the House.

A Practical Playwright

He Found Studies From Real Life Difficult and Dangerous.

By F. TOWNSEND SMITH.

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I am a writer of plays. Now, if there is one rule for every department of what the French call the beaux arts—there is no collective name for them in English—it is "use models." It is as essential in fiction as it is in painting and sculpture. I resolved in entering upon a literary career that as the bee extracts honey from the flower so would I extract human nature from actual persons. There is another kind of model that is needed by the story or play writer—locality.

One spring I determined to go for my models to the country. I wished, first, to locate my play where I could give it a pastoral flavor and, secondly, to depict the better grade of country people. Among the hills of Vermont I found a family named Powell, educated and otherwise respectable, but poor enough to take me in as a boarder.

I soon made a discovery, one that pleased me very much. I had struck an incipient courtship between a young man, Thomas Bradshaw, and Emily

"OH, EXCUSE ME!"

Powell. With this I had all the elements for my play. I don't mean that I had a motif or a plot, but scenery and characters, together with the most important feature in every play, which we playwrights call the "heart interest."

Of course I must not let the lovers know I was sketching them. That would spoil them at once for models and excite their animosity against me as well. I had plenty of time and resolved not to hurry. For the first week I occupied myself in laying down a scenario or skeleton for my play and in making excursions roundabout for attractive spots in which to locate the principal scenes. I proposed to have the scene painter use them.

A model for a character came to me in the person of Miss Euphemia Withers, a young woman about five years my junior—I am thirty-five—and principal of a children's school. The female villain of a play is called the "heavy woman," and this person, who was to make all the trouble in my play, was until Miss Withers arrived a blank in my brain. Therefore I hailed her coming with joy. She did not need to be bad. What I wished to copy was a real person. It was as easy for me to make a bad person on the stage out of a good one, or vice versa, as for an artist to convert a smile into a sour expression by turning the corners of the mouth down instead of up.

I had one advantage with Miss Withers that was denied me with the two lovers. I could be with her occasionally, while I must needs study the others from a distance. I really knew very little of Emily Powell till Miss Withers told me that she was a very bright girl. She also said that Mr. Bradshaw was an instructor in a neighboring university. This forced me to introduce a more artificial coloring into my play than I had intended.

I had not been at work long before I resolved to take Miss Withers into my confidence with regard to my play and my models—that is, excepting herself. By this I not only got the benefit of suggestions from her, but was enabled, if I wished, to go out to where the lovers were strolling or sitting. I could do so in company with another, thus the better concealing the fact that I was watching them. While they were sitting on a rustic seat on a hillside Miss Withers and I would be perched on the crest looking down upon them. Alone I could not long have maintained such a position; with a companion it was perfectly natural that I should do so ad infinitum.

In one respect I was badly handicapped in my work. I wanted Miss Withers for my "heavy" woman, but was prevented from working her into the play because I dare not let her know she was to be my model for such a part. All I could do was to note such of her idiosyncrasies and her sayings as would give her prototype in the play the realism I desired, that I might have them at hand when I should be obliged to use them. She would often ask me to explain to her such parts as were left unfinished, but I could not satisfy her except by confessing that they pertained to her. This I dared not do.

As the summer wore on I made excellent headway in my work and congratulated myself that when staged the realism there was in it would make it a great success. Whenever I notified Miss Withers that the lovers had gone forth on a stroll she would leave whatever she might be doing to accompany me. We would shadow them, keeping out of sight so far as possible, yet where we could observe them. One thing I confess with some shame. It was absolutely necessary to my purpose that I should catch bits of their conversation. There was a bench backed by bushes on which they often sat together. Miss Withers and I by taking a circuitous course found it possible without being observed to conceal ourselves in these bushes and hear all they said. It was eavesdropping, but I considered that the end justified the means. These loving interviews would in my play touch the hearts of many persons. I considered Miss Withers also justified since she was my assistant.

Two persons wrapped in a common work are very liable to become wrapped in each other. And the more absorbed they are in the former the more unconscious they are liable to be with regard to the latter. Miss Withers was called away for a few days, during which period I was surprised that I was unable to do any work. Indeed, I discovered that she was at least a thief even if this was her only iniquity, for she had stolen my heart. But I was by no means ready to yield to such enthrallment and when she returned went on with my play without showing any signs—at least any intentional signs—of my own "heart interest."

One day when Miss Withers and I were passing the barn on the Powell farm she expressed a desire to go up in the hayloft. We entered the barn, mounted to the upper portion by means of a ladder, lifted a trapdoor sufficiently to let us on to the second floor and found ourselves in with the sweet smelling hay. Cupid delights in odd places for forcing avowals. The hay was very inviting to sit on. Reclining on the fragrant lounge, I yielded to the influence of both the subdued light and the delicious resting place and poured forth, like the bird in the poem, my "unpremeditated lay."

I had scarcely finished when we heard a snicker immediately under the trapdoor and persons scurrying down the ladder.

We looked at each other with crimson faces.

Then, springing up, I rushed to the trapdoor and attempted to raise it. It had been bolted beneath.

Another play than the one I was at work on was being enacted. The lovers we had spied upon had detected us and turned the tables on us. We were locked in a hayloft and could not get out until we were let out. Here was a pretty how-de-do. When some one came in to feed the stock we could attract attention, the door would be unbolted and we could go free. But how would we be thereafter looked upon? Bribery and corruption could not avail us, even if practiced by one so adept in chicanery as my "heavy woman." What was to be done? Nothing. We awaited the inevitable, and I surmised what that inevitable would be.

Within half an hour we heard persons below. The two lovers were there—and several others. We heard them rummaging about, and presently some one said, "Let's go up and sit on the hay." All agreed and began to ascend the ladder. Then the bolt in the trap was shot, the door was lifted and the head of Emily Powell appeared. Seeing us, she put on a pretended look of surprise, exclaimed, "Oh, excuse me!" and disappeared. In a few moments we heard the party leaving the barn, and there was nothing left for us but to do the same.

It was fortunate that I had offered myself to my companion, for it enabled me to do the only thing to save us from obloquy if not from ridicule, which latter nothing could save us from. The eavesdroppers said nothing of what they had heard, but I boldly avowed that Miss Withers and I were engaged. She neither affirmed nor denied my statement to me or any one else and looked as though love was the furthest thing from her heart. However, before we parted she had so far recovered from the misadventure as to give an undemonstrative consent.

On returning to the city I completed my play and had no difficulty in putting it on the boards. I took my fiancee and others of her family to the theater when the piece was put on for the first time and, leaving them in their seats, went behind the curtain. It was soon evident that the production would be a great success. The interest was accumulative till the climax in the third act, and at the fall of the curtain I was called on for a speech. While making it I glanced down to where I had left Miss Withers, expecting a congratulatory smile. I was astonished to find her seat vacant. As soon as possible I went to the orchestra chairs and asked Mrs. Withers what had become of her daughter.

What was my horror to learn that she had recognized herself as the female villain of the play and had gone out during the third act in high dudgeon.

I followed her, but was not admitted to see her. I called the next day and the next with no better success. But I did not give her up until I heard that she had gone away, no one knew where. I cursed my folly in taking the woman I loved for a model, especially of a female villain.

I never succeeded in mollifying her, and I am still a bachelor.

Just a Boy, but He Will One Day Be Emperor of Germany

HERE is a boy—just a fun loving boy—who will some day be emperor of Germany and king of Prussia unless events occur which at present can't be foreseen. But the day when he will ascend the throne is in the distant future unless other events of an unexpected nature occur. But such events are not improbable when one is considering European nobility, and Prince William Frederick, born July 4, 1906, may not have to wait until his grandfather and his father die orderly deaths before becoming a real ruler. Should he have to wait the wait may be long. His grandfather, Emperor William, is only fifty-two years old, and his health is fair. His father, Crown Prince Frederick William, is only twenty-nine, and he is what insurance men would regard as "a good risk" so far as physical conditions are concerned, so the date when the boy will ascend the throne is probably far ahead. But this does not bother the boy a whit. He is content to be a boy, and the life he lives is like that of thousands of other boys in Berlin and other portions of the German empire. He works a little harder, perhaps, than the others, and he is hedged around by a few more bothersome rules, but in a general way Prince William Frederick is merely what the picture indicates, just a boy.

Because the prisoner has, since he began two months ago, an eight months' sentence on Pasquotank county roads, been stricken with paralysis to such an extent as to seriously affect his right arm and leg and well-nigh deprive him of the power of speech Governor Kitchin grants a pardon to John Hettrick, who was sentenced for false pretense. The pardon was asked for by the county authorities and many citizens.

Another pardon just granted by the governor was to Calvin Pitts, who has served nearly two years of a three years' sentence in Catawba county for seduction. The governor explains that the prisoner and the prosecutrix were both very young and he believes the prisoner has suffered sufficient punishment under the circumstances.

The work of completing the splendid new Church of The Good Shepherd, Episcopal, here, is now in full swing and the stone work is receiving the finishing touches. Then the next work will be the putting in place of the vast roof that has for its supports other than the stone walls the beautiful marble pillars that are distributed about the church. The outside work will all be completed, the sub-floor laid and a considerable part of the interior finish done by the early fall. When completed this will be one of the handsomest churches in this part of the country. It will have cost something like $65,000.

An especially notable charter issued today was to the Junior Settlement (Inc.) of Mt. Gilead, Montgomery county, the purpose being the maintenance of a school for boys that will provide both literary and technical training, W. L. Poteat, president of Wake Forest College, being one of the principal incorporators. The other two are Oscar Haywood and George Leask, New York.

Other charters granted are William Yearby Co., Durham, capital $15,000, by B. H. Thomas and others for drug business. And an amendment to the charter of The Greensboro Trading Stamp Co. changing the name to The Piedmont Co. Then there is a new charter for the A. L. Curl Co., Creedmoor, capital $25,000, by A. L. Curl and others for a mercantile business.

District Attorney H. F. Seawell arrived from the eastern part of the state to look after some matters pertaining to the approaching May term of the federal court here, which is to begin May 23. He says that he learned from strawberry growers that this is proving to be a very satisfactory season. While the yield has not been as great as it might have been the prices have been good and are holding up very satisfactorily. Mr. Seawell says that the dewberry crop in Moore county is developing very well this season, fully one hundred and fifty cars of this favorite berry being shipped north from Cameron, Moore county.

A pardon was issued today by Governor Kitchin for J. Grover Freeman, serving twenty months on the roads in Moore county for manufacturing liquor and carrying concealed weapons. It is set out in the reasons for the pardon that Freeman, who is a young man who bore a good reputation before he got into this trouble, has made a good prison record during the seventeen months he has served, and that the pardon is recommended by the judge and solicitor. The pardon is conditioned on good behavior.

WEEKLY WEATHER BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., May 16.—Mean temperatures were nearly normal over Southern and Northern Texas. Elsewhere over the cotton growing States there was an excess in temperature ranging from one to seven degrees. The weekly mean temperature ranged from 70 to 76 degrees over the Eastern, from 72 to 74 degrees over the Central and from 74 to 76 over the Western portion of the cotton belt. The lowest mean temperature reported was 70 degrees at Raleigh and Wilmington, N. C. No precipitation occurred except light amounts in Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, Louisana and States bordering the Atlantic coast. More than two inches occurred at a few stations in Southeastern Texas and at one station in Southern Louisana.

COTTON LETTER TO J. E. LATHAM.

New Orleans, La., May 16—The decision of the Supreme Court ordering the dissolution of the Standard Oil Co., found the trade prepared for the occasion. Many think that with the rendering o fthis decision, a disturbing uncertainty has been removed and that the markets will benefit by the disposition of capital to act more freely.

The market opened higher on old crops which seemed to receive fresh support in New York and the new crops benefited in sympathy. Liverpool seems to rest. While futures show steadiness, spot sales are small, total today 5,000 and prices five points lower.

The map shows cloudy weather in Texas, Oklahoma and Florida generally fair elsewhere. There was no rain of consequence outside of Florida and disappointment is felt at the failure of the rain prospects in the upper Atlantic States to materialize. Prospects for rain there are less good today, but unsettled showery weather is still indicated for the Northwestern quarter of the belt. Crop accounts from many points in Texas and Oklahoma and the Atlantics are not good. Oklahoma and the Aalantics need rain badly.

A suspicion has existed all along that if planting were delayed by excessive rains until May that on the first spell of hot weather, there would be complaints on the crop planted in excessively wet ground. The market showed more spirit and a firmer tone this morning. The improvement in the stock market reflecting freer enterprise by capital seemed to extend to cotton, July here working up to 15.88, August to 14.98 and October to 13.14.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, May 16.—Wheat—There was a good deal of old wheat bought to arrive for delivery this month, which had a weakening effect on the market. At the decline commission houses were the best buyers, supposed to be for the leading long interest. Weather conditions were generally favorable for both winter and spring wheat. The domestic news was all of a bearish character today and proved a greater influence than the strength in the United Kingdom markets. Dealers continue to look for a market of a trading character, but selling on the weak spots should be avoided.

Corn—With a continuance of cool weather it is only natural to look for some selling on the part of the farmers after planting is completed. Prices in the immediate future depend chiefly on the volume of country selling. There are a great many bulls on corn who still seem willing to buy on weak spots and short sellers having made much progress the last few days.

Oats—The country was a fair seller for shipment but the eastern demand was also a fair proportion. The lack of moisture east of the river is still being commented on and has made a good many people friendly to the long side of the deferred future. Dealers prefer this side on weak spots.

Provisions—The depression was the continued free selling of July and September ribs and lard by stock yards traders, coupled with offerings of July pork later in the day, credited to packers. Cash trade fair but the Western hog movement gave the market a heavy undertone.

IMPROVEMENT IN RETAIL DRY GOODS.

New York, May 16.—The Journal of Commerce says:

Positive reports of an improved retail dry goods trade during the week were filed in quarters where such reports are watched regularly and in a limited way the jobbers felt the effects of a better inquiry in house offerings.

PEACE PROSPECTS IN MEXICO BRIGHT SAYS COL. STEEVER

Special to Telegram.

Washington, May 16.—At the White House tonight a telegram was received from Colonel Steever, commander of the American forces at El Paso. Col. Steever said:

"The prospects for peace are much brighter today and an armistice will probably be agreed upon inside of 24 hours. Madero demands four cabinet places, one of them secretary of war, and fourteen governorships. The Mexican government agrees to give him a justice and possibly two others, the secretary of war to be chosen jointly by the two parties. Madero is likely to get ten governorships. Diaz is to resign immediately after the new governors are appointed, or within two months. This is the latest fairly reliable information I can procure."

Co-operative Housekeeping Plans Past and Present.

TO SOLVE "HELP" PROBLEM.

Success of an Experiment In Community Dining at Carthage, Mo. New York Artist and His Wife Evolve an Idea For Use In City Blocks.

Dear Elsa—Do you recall that a few years ago some genius, presumably several centuries ahead of the rest of us, proposed co-operative housekeeping on a colossal plan? This man—yes, it was a man who made the suggestion—wanted to divide the residents of a city or a town into large groups, the members of each group to live in houses clustered together, with a big kitchen, dining room and laundry in the center. Each family was to share pro rata in the expenses, and all were to eat in the common dining room, family tables being provided. All the laundry work was to be done in the group laundry. The housework in each home was to be performed by maids hired by the group, and a similar plan was to be followed in kitchen, dining room and laundry.

That scheme looked rosy in some respects, but most opaquely dark in others. Provision for toning down the general tendencies of human nature were not outlined by the towering genius who pleaded for co-operative housekeeping on this plan. He apparently did not take into consideration that little Willie, hopeful offspring of the Johnsons, usually bawled ten minutes at table because his mamma refused to let him have a second triangle of mince pie on the ground that an excess of that viand was not good for his stomach.

The genius also failed to recognize the fact that the table manners of the Jimson household were not calculated to please the more particular neighbors at the next table, though perhaps Mr. Jimson's method of swallowing his case knife and tucking his napkin three inches down his shirt collar might amuse them at first. Many other points of divergence between this family were similarly overlooked, such as the determination of Mrs. Jackson that her rooms be tidied at a certain hour each morning and the insistence of Mr. Jackson that he have his coffee and rolls served in his bedroom while he read the market reports in his morning paper.

A Missouri Dining Group.

Well, so far as I have been able to discover, this group plan of keeping house has not been adopted to any considerable extent, if at all, but just this week I have had a letter from an old friend of mine in Carthage, Mo., one of the prettiest towns in the Ozark hills, where for several years, as she tells me, a co-operative dining room enterprise has been carried on with signal success. Some years ago a number of the most prominent women of Carthage, having wearied and sickened of the eternal cook and kitchen maid problem, put their heads together and evolved a scheme that promised relief. They consulted also with their collective husbands, so to speak, and the men of the households approved the plan, which was to rent one of the good old fashioned residences in a central section of the town which happened to be vacant. This roomy house was in easy walking distance of all the families in the group. It was fitted up as a co-operative kitchen and dining emporium. Several chambers were turned into dining rooms, so that each family might eat in private if the members desired. Then there was a larger dining room, in which several families chose to eat, having jolly good social times together at meals.

Each family shared in the expenses of food, help and the general upkeep of the premises, according to the number of persons in the family, a competent housekeeper being put in charge of the whole arrangement. It was predicted that the experiment would fail, but it proved to be a success. The co-operative dining home has become in effect a social club as well, where books and magazines and games are enjoyed by the members. The help appear to like their work much better than the average cook or maid in a private house. Under the housekeeper they have more liberty and independence than they would be likely to enjoy under the orders of a woman in her own home. What do you think of the Carthage plan?

Plan For Big Cities.

Just now I have heard of a new "community kitchen" plan intended for large cities, but it might work well in smaller towns too. Charles Rollinson Lamb, president of the Municipal Art society of New York, with the aid of his wife has evolved this scheme. It shows the community kitchen set in the center of the back yard space of the city block, with neat little passageways running from this kitchen to each private house. Here a chef and two or three assistants can prepare all the food for all the people in the block, and the private kitchen is eliminated. With it go Bridget and Mrs. Newlywed's biscuits and cold storage chicken and the grocer's boy who is always late. In their place come a professional cook, who never gets out of order.

Mr. Lamb told a reporter how he happened to think of this plan for a community kitchen, and it seems he didn't think of it at all. It was his wife. They were sitting at the library table after dinner one fine night. History does not state whether or not Bridget had just withdrawn from their presence with ominous mutterings. It is quite probable, however. Anyway, Mrs. Lamb heaved a sigh. Mr. Lamb looked up.

"What are you doing this time?" he asked.

The answer marks an epoch in history.

"I'm trying to figure out how many families there are in this block, and how many Bridgets, and how much they all cost, and why all the cooking might not just as well be done in one kitchen and save all the bother."

Mr. Lamb threw down his book, and together they tackled the problem. A city block is 800 feet wide and 200 feet long. Allowing twenty feet for each house lot, there are 100 lots, which means 100 houses and 100 cooks. If these cooks receive an average wage of $20 a month they cost $2,000. The houses are heated probably from a furnace, but there is a separate kitchen range in each, which burns perhaps a ton of coal a month. The cost of 100 tons of stove coal must be added to the kitchen expenses as well as the innumerable other expenses for stoves, utensils, refrigerators and scouring soap.

Expenses Are Reduced.

On the other hand, the cost of running the co-operative kitchen comes to about one-sixth of this. A competent chef might earn $150 a month, a subchef $75 and two assistant cooks $50 each, making a cost of $325 for all the service needed. The waitresses, of course, are less expensive servants and belong in the individual households.

But the saving of expense is only one of the obvious advantages of the community kitchen. Far more important is the saving of drudgery and peace of mind. It was this which recommended the scheme to the Lambs. Mrs. Lamb is an artist of renown. Her specialty is portrait and decorative painting and miniatures, and when Mr. Lamb is preparing one of his big ecclesiastical designs she does the life sized figures for him. But Mrs. Lamb finds that domestic cares interfere seriously with her artistic career.

No Worrying as to Bridget.

"Now, if we had the community kitchen," it was explained eagerly by her husband, "all she would have to do would be to telephone in to the manager in the morning what we wanted for our meals that day. That would end it; no worrying because Bridget had the 'dumps,' no teaching the new cook how to do things and no fear that dinner will be spoiled. She could give what time she had to arranging the table beautifully, planning the best variety for the meals and giving all the little touches which make home life beautiful, because she would be spared the drudgery which just keeps it going."

Well, for my part, I am free to say that the home kitchen which has existed since the beginning of family life suits me. I like to have a place where I can potter around and prepare things that I want when I want them and that my relatives and friends like. I have a notion that most women feel the same way about it, so I don't believe we are going to enter the community kitchen or co-operative housekeeping sphere on a large scale for a long time yet. Still, all these suggestions are interesting, don't you think?

STATE MAY TAKE OVER ELKIN AND ALLEGHANY R. R.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, May 16.—The Council of State considered for some time today a proposition made by Jno. A. Mills, president of the Raleigh & Southport, and capitalists he represents, to take over the Elkin & Alleghany railroad, Elkin to Sparta, and complete it and put it in operation without further delay.

The work on this road has been carried on with state convict labor to the extent that twelve of the proposed thirty miles of road has been graded at a cost of $135,000 of which $100,000 is an investment by the State through convict labor. By an act of the recent legislature this railroad company nor any other in which the State has vested interest, cannot be disposed of without the consent of the Council of State.

Mr. Mills and those he represents are to draw up a written proposition within the next few days and this is to be submitted to the State board of internal improvements and through this board, to the Council of State at a special meeting Saturday when Mr. Mills is to have a definite answer to his proposal.

Here in connection with the preliminary conference today as interested in the Elkin & Alleghany road were Hugh G. Chatham, president; A. H. Eller, Winston-Salem; R. A. Doughton, Sparta; J. C. Smoot, Wilkesboro; Frank Alspaugh, Winston-Salem; and Col. G. W. Hinshaw, Winston-Salem.

SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION MEETS TODAY IN JACKSONVILLE

Brief Review of Denominational Work---Statistics of Convention and Figures Relating to Progress of Great Denomination.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 16.—Greater in number than the British Parliament or the Congress of the United States, the Southern Baptist Convention will meet here this week, beginning the 17th, with delegates present from every State in the South.

The convention is made up of messengers, or delegates, from churches, associations, State conventions, missionary societies and Sunday schools. All Baptist churches are independent. Therefore the convention has no authority to bind the churches in its territory. Ministers and laymen are admitted into the convention on the same basis, without any official distinction between the clergy and laymen.

The Baptist cry through the ages has been. "A church without a pope, and a State without a king." They have always held as a fundermental principle that the indivilual soul is competent to deal with God. The Bible is their only creed and sole guide in matters of faith and doctrine. From its teachings they hold that all men are born in sin, and can find salvation only through faith in Jesus Christ. They accept the vicarious atonement of Christ, believing in His death on the cross. His resurrection from the grave, and His ascension to the right hand of the Father as the foundation and security of salvation. Baptists insist upon what is called believers' baptism as a purequisite to church membership, in the independence of the local church, and hold that each church is a spiritual, democratic body, separate from the State, owing its first allegiance to God. In a Baptist church there are no priestly orders. Ministers are solemnly set apart to the work of the ministry, without official distinction, or authority, one over another, the terms "pastor," "bishop" and "elder" being different names for the same office.

The convention has three boards—the Foreign Mission Board, with headquarters at Richmond; the Home Mission Board, with headquarters at Atlanta, and the Sunday School Board, with headquarters at Nashville. The work of the Foreign Mission Board is to preach the gospel in foreign lands. The Home Mission Board looks after mission work in the home field, which includes the Southern States. Cuba and the Panama section. The Sunday School Board is the head of the Sunday school work, and publishes Sunday school helps, periodicals and books for use in the Sunday schools and young people's societies. The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, the School of the Prophets, located at Louisville, Ky., is also under the control of the Southern Baptist Convention.

According to the best available figures, there are about 6,280,649 Baptists. Of this number 4,110,873 are in the South; 2,218,911 of the Southern Baptists are white, 1,891,962 colored. In the Northern States there are 1,190,293 Baptists. There are 22,438 churches connected with the Southern Baptists Convention. They make up the largest religious denomination in the South. The Baptists are said to have 39.5 per cent. of the church membership of the South, the Methodists 26.5 per cent, Catholics 15.9 per cent, Disciples 5.2 per cent, Presbyterians 4.9 per cent, Episcopalians 1.7 per cent, and all others 5.9 per cent.

The churches connected with this convention raised last year for carrying on their work, $9,474,777. Of this sum $1,336,519 was given for missions. The church property of the Southern Baptist Convention is valued at $37,203,522.

The Baptists lay no claim to apostolic succession, but their churches, in their co-operative work, are models after the churches found in the New Testament.

Roger Williams was not the first Baptist as some erroneously suppose. The history of the church runs back for hundreds of years before his day. John Bunyun, who lived nearly a hundred years before Williams was born, was a Baptist. Williams was, however, the first to become a Baptist on American soil, and he organized the first American Baptist church in Providence, R. I. The first Baptist church in the South was constituted in South Carolina, in 1682. The first established in North Carolina was in 1653; in Virginia, 1714; in Tennessee, 1770; in Georgia, 1771; in Mississippi, 1780; in Kentucky, 1781; in Alabama, 1803; in Florida, 1838. In 1762, when the great Baptist persecution began in Virginia, there were only 3,000 Baptists in the whole country. In twenty-four years they had increased to 35,000. In 1790, there were 50,000; in 1812, 175,000; in 1825, 238,000; in 1840, 570,000; and in 1853, 1,258,765. Today there are in the South alone 4,110,873

In 1814, the Baptists of the United States gave for missions, $134,112, and had only 64 missionaries employed. Last year they gave $865,585 for missions, and there were eight hundred missionaries on the foreign field. In 1853, Southern Baptists raised $21,000 for foreign missions, and $13,000 for home missions. There were two foreign missions—one in Africa, and one in China. In these two fields nineteen missionaries were at work. The home missions board reported seventy-seven missionaries at work, and 642 baptisms in the same period. Last year, $460,797 was raised for foreign missions in the territory of the Southern Baptist Convention, and there were 231 missionaries on the foreign field. The home board reported last year, $283,436, with 1,066 missionaries at work, and 188,000 baptisms.

GLIMPES OF AUTHORS AND BOOK NOTES

Miss Florence Wickham, the young contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who has just made a list in the new opera, "Barbe-Bleue," is a cousin of Vaughan Kester, the author of "The Prodigal Judge," published by the Bobb-Merrill Company.

Mrs. Belloc-Lowndes, whose new novel, "When No Man Pursueth," is announced for publication by Mitchell Kennerley, is the sister of Mr. Hilaire Belloc. Mrs. Lowndes was brought up in a literary and artistic atmosphere from childhood both in England, where she was educated at the Convent of the Holy Child, at Mayfield, and in France, where she spent much of her youth.

Mrs. Mabel Cronise Jones, writer of "Achsah, the Sister of Jairus," an excellent novelette of Palestine at the time of Christ, is a resident of Harrisburg, and is the wife of the veteran newspaper man, Thomas H. Jones.

Leonard Merrick, who has come into prominence in America with the publication by Mitchell Kennerley of "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," 47 years old and married. He says his recreations consist of "music, reading other people's novels and seeing other people's plays." Mr. Merrick spends most of his time in France.

E. Phillips Oppenheim, whose latest novel, "The Moving Finger," is just from the press of Little, Brown & Co., who published all his works in this country, was scheduled as one speaker at the banquet of the American Booksellers' Association at the Hotel Astor in New York. Mr. Oppenheim has had a long service in literature. His first short story was published when he was 18 and his first novel when he was 20. He is now 44 years of age. He was married in America nearly 20 years ago, and he has a daughter of 13. Mr. Oppenheim says of himself and his labors: "I live in a cottage upon the east coast, with a view of the North Sea from my windows, excellent golf links within a few yards and plenty of rough shooting within easy distance. I have no system of work, but, generally speaking, half my time is devoted to writing, and the other half is divided between exercise and sport, visits to London and travel. My work itself is accomplished with the help of a secretary. When I used to write my stories with my own hand I found my ideas came so much faster than my fingers could work that I prayed for some more speedy method of transmission. Now I usually dictate my stories as they unfold themselves to my secretary, who takes them in shorthand. She then transcribes them roughly by means of a typewriter, and from these sheets I dictate the final effort, subject to the inevitable revision. These things, of course, are all a matter of custom, but, whereas many of my fellow-writers have told me that they found it impossible to dictate satisfactorily, I myself, from the very first moment, found it by far the most effective method of getting my work on to paper. This is naturally a matter of individual idiosyncrasy."

Will N. Harben, author of nearly a dozen novels of plain Georgia folks and life, is seeing the characters in one of them—"Ann Boyd"—as they speak and move in the scenes of a play made from the book by Lucille LaVerne. The play was produced in Boston recently. "Ann Boyd" was one of the novels of Mr. Harben's which led W. D. Howells to characterize him as "one of the best of American localities." His latest novel, "Dixie Hart," was published last fall, and he is now engaged in finishing another, which the Harpers will publish next fall.

John Fleming Wilson, the author of "The Land Claimers," is a Princeton graduate. Mr. Wilson spent several years in newspaper work, largely on the Pacific Coast. Mr. Wilson later turned his attention to magazine work exclusively, and his stories may be found frequently in the Saturday Evening Post, the American Magazine, McClure's, Hampton's and Harper's. The scenes of his first novel. "The Land Claimers," just published by Little, Brown & Co., are located in the Siletz region of Oregon, and the story pictures life in the great forests in this vicinity, and the struggle of those who "took up" the great timber claims.

William H. Hobbs, whose book, "Characteristics of Existing Glaciers," is published by Macmillans, studied at Johns Hopkins University, obtaining the degree of Ph.D. there in 1888. For some years he was professor of geology at the University of Wisconsin, but about ten years ago he accepted the position of professor of geology and director of the geology laboratory at the University of Michigan, and still holds that position. He is a prolific writer on geological subjects and is well known in that profession.

After a sojourn of several months in her native country, during which period her new novel, "How Leslie Loved," was published, Anne Warner has sailed for England, where she says she will permanently reside. To a reporter who interviewed her on the steamship she said: "I am going to make a home for my father, my children and myself in England: I simply must move to a country where I can afford to live. I can get three days of travel and sightseeing for $50, in Europe, and that amount would scarcely pay for a new hat in the United States." For nearly two years previous to her visit to her old home in St. Paul, Anne Warner resided in Germany, where her daughter was being educated.

Charles Aden Seltzer, author of "The Range Riders," one of the new Western stories published by the Outlook Publishing Company, has his home in Cleveland. Incidentally, he suffers occasionally from the woes of the "newly-arrived." When his new book was first presented to the bookselling fraternity one bookseller reported with the pertinent inquiry: "Who is this man Seltzer, anyway?" Mr. Seltzer's publishers' acquainted him with the incident, to which Mr. Seltzer responds: "I ain't bragin' none. Things that we think are big in the beginnin' sometimes amount to shucks. But that hadn't ought to keep us from tryin.' Give us time an' mebbe we'll git where we're goin.' I have been ten years in reaching my present dizzy eminence. The above has been my motto. And now at the end of a decade of endeavor arises the pertinent query: 'Who is this man Seltzer, anyway?' To very many other persons who may have asked—and who no doubt will ask—the same question, we can have but one reply. This is—wait. The name 'Seltzer' suggests effervescence, and might lead the unwary to believe yours truly to be a fuzzy sort of cuss, but I can truthfully say with my hand on my heart that this is not so."

Although he has ample leisure during the day, Jeffery Farnol says he does his best work at night. It is now disclosed that some of the best parts of "The Broad Highway" were written in the house in Englewood, N. J., where Mr. Farnol lived during his several years' residence in the State. Now it is from an upper chamber in a comfortable cottage along the actual "broad highway" of the county of Kent, England, that he burns the midnight gas, for Farnol is hard at work on a new novel of the period of "The Broad Highway," but with its scenes laid principally in London. In the meantime his English publishers announce that 50,000 copies of "The Broad Highway" have been sold, while his American publishers (Little, Brown & Co.,) are heralding the fact that the novel is the best-selling book in the United States.

UNUSUAL PETITION FOR PAROLE IN TEXAS

Special to Telegram.

San Antonio, Tex, May 16.—Governor Colquitt was confronted today with a most unusual petition for parole. The man asking this liberty is W. J. Dent, a cousin of General Stonewall Jackson. The records show that Dent has previously served terms in the State prisons of Missouri, Colorado, and Texas. He was sent up the last time about ten years ago convicted of having forged a pardon of a State prisoner named Isaacs.

Under the law in this State, if one fraudently secures the release of a State prisoner, such an one shall, upon conviction, take the place of the prisoner released. In this instance, Isaacs had been sent up for life on a murder charge.

Former Governor J. D. Sayers recommended the parole of Dent, but under the State parole law, he was deprived of the benefit because of having been previously convicted and sent to the penitentiary. It is understood Governor Colquitt is inclined to clemency if he can find a way clear to legally grant it.

Even the bald-headed actor may have a good part.

Three Men on Police Board, Two on Force, a License Anomaly.

Warwick, R. I., May 16.—A situation considered wholly unique exists in this town, where a board of three police commissioners has been appointed by Governor Pothier to govern a police force whose total number is just two men.

The appointment of three to direct two others was made in accord with the provisions of an act passed by the Legislature on the very day of adjournment.

Senator Walter H. Bowen, chairman of the board for the next three years, said the act was designed not because the town was a lawless community, but to relieve Town Council from the continual fight over the granting of over 50 liquor licenses and the enforcement of the liquor laws, leaving that body free and untrammeled in the conduct of the business affairs of the town.

Talk to Mothers.

There is need in the home for cuts, bruises, sores and sprains, children and others are heirs to a real good antiseptic liniment, one which will not burn and hurt worse than the wound itself, and which will give the greatest relief and prevent scars. Vick's Liniment is prepared for this purpose. Take this suggestion from a trained druggist who knows.

WOOL SCHEDULE CAUSES DIVISION

Democrats In the House Seem Unable to Agree.

EACH MAN HIS OWN PARTY.

J. Adam Bede Laments That There Is Nothing to Hold the Members of Congress Together—New Congressional Directory Puts on Frills and Is Compared to Harem Skirt.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, May 16.—(Special.)—"The citadel of protection," as Senator Aldrich called the wool schedule, is giving the Democrats more trouble than any other feature of the tariff. It was easy enough to get nearly all the Democrats to support the Canadian reciprocity agreement, and they all united on the farmers' free list bill, but when they started on wool they found it not exactly a "citadel," but a fork in the road, a rock upon which they split.

When the Democrats returned to power after the McKinley bill was passed they put through a "popgun" free wool bill. They put free wool in the Wilson law, and the majority of the party wants free wool now. But there is a great deal of protection sentiment among the Democrats of the house, and free wool is regarded as free trade.

It really looks as if this tariff question were destined to rend the political parties. It has divided the Republicans and is now dividing the Democrats 391 Parties In the House.

It was J. Adam Bede, once a humorist of the house, who recently declared that there were 391 political parties in the house, each man being a party of his own. "There is nothing to hold the men together now," lamented Bede. "Each man goes out for himself and votes as he pleases. Every man thinks his opinion on party questions is supreme."

That is a fact, although the Democrats are making heroic efforts to maintain a party organization. The tariff is supposed to be the dividing line, but it really causes more division than unity in both parties.

Putting on Frills.

The Congressional Directory, as if celebrating the advent of a Democratic congress, has been putting on many frills. There are scrollwork and other evidences of the "best seller" in its makeup. Instead of the usual publication devoted to the dry facts of necessary information there are innovations which make it look quite frisky, like a hobble skirt or the more pronounced harem skirt of short duration.

Old style and new style methods of printing have been introduced, and evidently an effort was made to make the new Democratic Congressional Directory something more than a biography of congress with accompany information. These are days of change and improvements, and the Congressional Directory is not to be left behind.

An Unfriendly Act.

In diplomatic "patter" there is a phrase "an unfriendly act." It does not lead to war, but approaches hostilities about as near as Touchstone's "countercheck quarrelsome." Senator Williams of Mississippi has introduced a bill providing for the "investigation of commissions."

Now, that is, in diplomatic language, "an unfriendly act," for it brings prominently to notice the fact that many an ex-senator is snugly ensconced in a commission job. Williams goes far beyond a "breach of senatorial courtesy," which is bad enough. The latter does not touch the pocketbook of a fellow senator; it does not disturb him in his sinecure. But to talk about investigating and reporting upon commissions touches senators in their tenderest spot.

Williams is a new man in the senate and is not versed in senatorial ways.

"If They Could See Us."

Congressman Lawrence of Massachusetts knows all about the ridiculousness of a situation. "Just look in there," he said, pointing to the hall of the house. "If the constituents of a man could look down on him and see him talking to not more than half a dozen men in the whole house what would they think? A man gets up and talks to a vast expanse of empty seats. Perhaps a few will listen, but not many. And yet his constituents suppose that he is really doing the country a great service."

After weeks of that kind of proceedings the house put in ten hours of solid work in one day, passing the tariff bill.

Wasted Sarcasm.

Some people out in western Pennsylvania united in writing a very sarcastic letter to Congressman Gregg about the parcels post, which they favored. In cutting words they told of the benefits of the parcels post, referring to how it had been "forced upon fifty-three countries, monarchies and semi-civilized peoples," yet had not caused them to protest.

The sarcasm was wasted upon Gregg. He's for a parcels post, and as a member of the postoffice committee he will try to have it adopted. But it is very doubtful about a parcels post bill passing this congress. The country merchants have been working hard against it with the Democratic members.

SUPREME COURT'S DECISION IN STANDARD OIL CASE

Hon. E. J. Justice Presents Logical View of the Court's Action and its Probable Effects Upon Trust Litigation.

The decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Sandard Oil case has been the subject of discussion among the attorneys, business men and many other classes of citizens in the city, since it was rendered Monday, and the various points of the case and the decision have been argued from many points of view. As a contribution to the discussion, and an able presentation of some of the chief points in the decision, The Telegram presents a written interview, secured from E. J. Justice, one of the most prominent lawyers of the city. Mr. Justice says:

"The decision of the Supreme Court in the Standard Oil case transfers the trust question to the people for solution.

"Allow me to call attention to a most important phase of the subject.

"As was pointed out in the dissent of Judge Harlan, the court has reversed itself as to the meaning of the first section of the Sherman Anti-trust law. That section reads: 'Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal.'

"In the Northern Securities case the court seemed to hold that any agreement in restraint of trade was a violation of the law.

"In the Standard Oil case it holds that though an agreement be in restraint of trade it does not violate the law unless it unreasonably restrains trade and interferes with commerce.

"The decision of the court in this last case establishes what the law is, and it may be assumed the opinion will not be changed, at least, not by the court as now constituted.

"The 'good trust' and 'the bad trust' have come to stay unless the distinction is abolished by the Legislative department of the Government, and it is with reference to this phase of the matter that I desire to speak publicly.

"There is no rule laid down by the court by which one can determine whether a given combination in restraint of trade will be classed with 'the sheep' or 'the goats.'

"The determination of the question will in each case be practically arbitrary. Lawyers will wrangle, and stock gamblers will gamble over what the classification of various alleged trusts will be, but only after the court has spoken will it be known whether a given combination restraining trade and commerce accomplishes its purposes in unreasonable way.

"The tendency of modern judicial decisions is to give to the judges of the higher courts arbitrary power.

"This tendency is seen in the recent opinions of the Supreme Court of our State in the increasing frequency of the refusal to grant new trials for admitted error by invoking the doctrine of 'harmless error.' It is also observed in the opinions of the Supreme Court of the United States in the rate cases.

"Formerly the court held that the rate making power rested entirely with the Legislative department of the Government. The holding now is that a given rate will be sustained or set aside by the court according as it may think the rate reasonable or unreasonable.

"And now the question of reasonableness must be determined before it can be known whether a trust will be protected or destroyed. This being the law of the land it must be abeyed until changed in an orderly way.

"There is no provision of the Constitution restraining the Legislative department from changing this law. It will be borne in mind that the court, in the Stand Oil case, was construing an Act of Congress, and that Congress can, therefore, change the law as announced by the court by changing its act.

"Congress has the power to amend the anti-trust act so as to make it mean what the Supreme Court seemed to think it meant in the Northern Securities case—that is that all trusts are bad.

"Unless this is done speedily it will place a temptation before Presidents and Governors to pack the benches with men whose views are in accord with theirs as to whether particular trusts are ood or bad, and will force the trusts into politics in the most objectionable way.

"The only safe principle upon which to proceed is to recognize the difference between a legitimate business enterprise, individual or corporate, on the one hand, and a trust in restraint of trade on the other.

"If once the voters assent to the doctrine that monopoly is a good thing if it is 'reasonably' carried on, they will have opened Pandora's box of evils, that they will not close again.

"As Judge White says in the opinion in the Standard Oil case the contending sides are as far apart as the poles. He calls the facts and the law a 'jungle,' and says that on the one hand it is insisted 'with relentless pertinacity and minuteness of analysis,' that the Standard Oil Company is 'oppressing the public and destroying the just rights of others,' while on the other hand it is insisted 'in powerful analysis of the facts,' that it is 'a benefaction to the general public as well as an enormous advantage to individuals.' These will be the issues between defenders and opponents of the trusts in every instance, if all trusts are not to be destroyed outright. If they are to be tolerated by the people with the view that they can be controlled, I am convinced that the power of illegitimate and dishonest wealth will ultimately prevail, and that the burdens of the American people—plutocracy and idle rich—will increase.

"If the voters see to it that those elected by them really represent the masses of the people, and not the 'Interests,' the statutes will be so written as to remove confusion, and protect the public from oppression.

"There are two classes of men who in office serve the trusts: First those who are elected by the trusts and are known as 'reactionaries' and who prefer to serve them; and second, those who are so consumed with the desire to hold office that their fear of losing it paralyses them when in positions of power and influence.

"Their own interests make the people take the side against special privilege if they become aroused to the importance of taking the trouble to understand the merits of political issues.

"It is with the hope of helping somewhat, to present the exact issue on the trust question, and of increasing public interest in matters that the public must decide that I write.

PLAYERS LIKE TO CHANGE JOBS

Monotony of Daily Grind Causes Baseball Stars to Shift Around.

COBB WOULD LIKE TO PITCH.

Detroit's Great Batter and Outfielder Anxious to Try His Slants Against Sluggers — Tinker Another — Brown Wants to Be Infielder.

By TOMMY CLARK.

Baseball players are queer individuals. Mighty few of them are satisfied with their positions. The pitchers would be catchers, and catchers would be pitchers. The outfielders would like to cease chasing flies and stop grounders. The infielders would like to wander to the outfield and chase the elusive fly. Nearly every player has an ambition to play some other position than the one in which he has made his reputation. Doing a specialty becomes tiresome to the average ball tosser, and he imagines the other fellow's work is easier than his own until he tries it.

For instance, Charley Dooin, the manager of the Phillies, when he is not warming up pitchers likes to gobble up grounders in the infield. Sherwood Magee of the same team has to be chased away from first base when serious practice begins. Ed Walsh of the White Sox would sooner be a first baseman or an outfielder than do slab duty. Ty Cobb would like nothing better than to go into the box and twirl in a regular game. During the off season Tyrus does the pitching for a semipro. team in Augusta, Ga., his home town. Most any afternoon during the regular season Cobb can be seen pitching to the batters.

Maybe you have watched Joe Tinker, the Cubs' great shortstop, trying to solve the mysteries of pitching during practice. Frank Schulte is usually his catcher. Stanage, the Detroit backstop, has to be driven back of the bat. He would sooner play in the infield than be called the Tigers' star catcher. "Three Fingered" Brown of the Cubs, who seems to be all in as a pitcher, thinks he would make good as an infielder. Before he became a twirler he played in the infield, so the position is not new to him.

It's the monotony of doing the same thing day after day that wears on the players, and it is real fun for them to shift to some other position even for a few minutes.

This habit has resulted in some players turning out to be stars in positions other than the ones to which they have been assigned by their managers.

Ted Easterly of Cleveland, who is good enough to catch for any team, has given up backstop work and is now playing right field for the Naps.

Jack Flynn, who did most of the first base playing for Pittsburg last season, is now a catcher. Flynn was a first class backstop while with Georgetown.

J. I. Taylor, president of the Boston Americans, believes that his shortstop, Wagner, will be even better behind the bat than in the infield, but the chances are that Wagner will remain at his old station. Tom Williams, a former catcher, is now holding down bag No. 1 for the Boston Americans. Fred Snodgrass of the Giants gave promise of developing into a crack catcher. Last season McGraw placed him in the outfield, where he has played fairly good ball.

There is only one department of the game where all like to shine. That is batting. Ed Walsh may like to play first, but when it comes his time to bat in practice you bet he doesn't surrender it. He bats. It is so with every man in the game. He may be dissatisfied with his position, he may want to play another, but you bet he won't surrender his place in the batting order to anybody. There are no exceptions.

English Soccer Team Coming.

Announcement has been made that the Corinthians of England, the famous amateur soccer football team which has visited many parts of the world, will tour the United States and Canada in September. The tourists will start their schedule in Canada and play also in Philadelphia, New York, St. Louis, Chicago and Fall River.

NEW BROWNS EXCEL HOLDOVERS IN ABILITY.

New York and Cleveland were certainly kind to the St. Louis Browns last winter. About the only silver lining to the nimbus shrouded outlook of the team this spring has been the uniformly good performance of Catcher Clarke, whom the Naps turned over to the Browns for Art Griggs, and Laporte and Austin, whom $5,000, with Hartzell to "boot," obtained from the Highlanders.

These three men have made up nearly half the attacking strength of the Browns.

If there are any more at home like these the Browns are open for negotiations at all times if the terms are as modest as those of the instances cited.

ABLES' BIG HOOKS ENABLE HIM TO HIDE BALL.

Harry Ables, the giant southpaw pitcher of the New York Americans, enjoys one most unique distinction. He has the most impressive set of hands ever seen in professional baseball.

The hams that Honus Wagner calls hands dwindle into insignificance alongside the "hooks" of the big new portsider from Texas. Not only are Ables' hands exceptionally large—as large as patent washboards almost—but his fingers are exceptionally long. The digits are so long that Ables can hide a regulation baseball in the palm of his hand. A regulation baseball, by the way, is nine inches in circumference.

Ables has as much natural "stuff" as any pitcher who has ever been in fast company. Had he the experience of some of the old heads he would right now be one of the greatest phenoms of all time. He can simply do anything with the old horsehide.

Ables believes that his big hands and long fingers give him natural advantages possessed by no other major league pitcher. His fingers are so long that the ball drops in and among them much as a marble would in the hand of a boy. Consequently Ables does not have to cover up his pitching hand with his glove, as most twirlers do.

CLARKE PLAYING GREAT BALL

Manager of Pirates Now Putting Up Wonderful All Around Game.

Where is that gink who said Fred Clarke had seen his best days as a ball player? Find him for us and we'll show him what's what. Right now the leader of the Pittsburg Pirates is playing as well as he ever did. He is batting like a demon, running the bases like a cyclone and gathering in everything that comes out into his little spot in left field.

Last winter several experts said that Clarke was about due for a big slump in his playing and that before the 1911 season was half over the veteran would announce that he was through as a player and manage the team from the bench. Fred has surprised them all and is setting a fine example for many members of his team to follow.

Yes; every team in the country is looking for ball tossers of the Clarke caliber. With a few of them on any team winning pennants would be an easy matter.

NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIPS.

Track and Field Leaders to Be Decided at Pittsburg.

Schenley park, Pittsburg, will be the scene of the national athletic championships for junior and senior titles June 30 and July 1. The events for the senior class will be held on the latter named date. A similar list of contests will be held in both series, being as follows: One hundred yard run, 220 yard run, 440 yard run, 880 yard run, one mile run, five mile run, 120 yard high hurdle, 220 yard low hurdle, pole vault, running hop, step and jump, throwing fifty-six pound weight, throwing sixteen pound hammer, putting sixteen pound shot, throwing the discus and throwing the javelin.

Rules of the Amateur Athletic union will govern, and the games will be open to all registered athletes.

Schaefer Making Good In Outfield.

One of the finds of the season is the veteran Germany Schaefer of the Washington Americans. When he announced in low and high German that he was going to become an outfielder and get a regular berth in the suburbs he was chided for using up valuable oxygen, but he is fulfilling his own predictions. He is hitting, his fielding has been fine, and his base running and general versatility in a game make him a most pleasing figure in the line-up.

Will Cornell Be Rowing Champion?

Will Cornell, the conqueror of Harvard and Syracuse on the water, be master of Yale? The two mile race on Lake Carnegie, May 20, will decide. Princeton will be a third starter.

PATRIOTS EXTRACTED HORNETS BITER IN SECOND GAME

Eldridge in Fine Form and Allowed Only as Many Hits as His Teammates Scored Runs - - - Hornets Couldn't Pass Second Sack.

Charlotte, May 16.—Eldridge pitched one of the best games witnessed by fans here this season and the Patriots easily took the second of the series from the Hornets by score of three to nothing. Hankie was in good form also, but he was not supported as well as the visiting man. Greensboro's southpaw allowed but three hits and kept these so well scattered that the players scarcely knew when they came. Doak starred at third, almost every ball to him being a difficult chance yet he accepted all of them with apparent ease. Doyle's crowd scored twice in the fourth and once again in the fifth. Charlotte never had a runner nearer than second base.

ANDERSON CHECKS LOSING STREAK IN 11 INNING GAME

Anderson, S. C., May 16.—Anderson checked her losing streak this afternoon by defeating Spartanburg in an exciting eleven inning contest, the final score being 4 to 3. Two home runs by the shortstop of the locals once with a runner on featured. Crouch, the new twirler from Spartanburg, walked in the first man, and was taken out. Cochran right fielder for Spartanburg, also just signed from Clemson, got a two-bagger and a single and showed up well in his debut.

Score: R. H. E.

BATTING RALLY BETWEEN TWINS AND SPINNERS

Winston-Salem, May 16.—The Twins took the second of the series in an extremely slow game, which nevertheless held the interest of the spectators, by the score of 9 to 7. Both pitchers were wild, Yount extremely so. Ray had a couple of bad innings, but otherwise pitched a fair game. The hitting was hard on both sides, but the Twins had the advantage.

The fielding was of a rather poor and listless sort, that of the Twins about the poorest of the season. A decided feature of the game was the hitting of the first two local batsmen by Yount and his presenting a pass to the next one. The prettiest play of the game was the last in the ninth, when O'Halloran leaped into the air and pulled down a hard drive that looked good for two.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
